

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

THE Catalogue that Mr Halliwell printed of the contents of the Vernon MS. was, unluckily, one of his own making, and not a copy of that prefixed to the magnificent Southern-dialect volume by the Scribe who wrote it, and which will, I hope, be printed in the next Text that the Society issues from this MS. One result of the nonpublication of it before, was, that when searching for other copies of the Stacyons of Rome, for the volume of "Political, Religious, and Love Poems," edited by me in the early part of this year for the Society, I saw nothing like the Stacyons in the printed Catalogue, and felt sure that the Poem was not in the Vernon MS., notwithstanding Mr Halliwell's warning that his notices "must be accepted as very imperfect." But as there were two entries in that gentleman's Catalogue of "117, Short Religious Poems, f. 298, rº \beta.; 128, Short Religious Poems, fol. 319, ro a," and I had long contemplated continuing the small instalment of these pieces edited by me for the Philological Society (Trans. Pt. II., 1858), I commissioned our Oxford copier to transcribe from the MS. the first and last lines, and burdens if any, of all these Short Poems. The execution of the order was delayed for some months, but when it was completed, and I was turning over the leaves of the copy, what should appear on three of the foolscap sheets, for fol. 314, ro y, to fol. 315 ro y, of the MS., but the first and last lines of the different paragraphs of the Stations, thus explaining Mr Halliwell's entry, "Short Religious Poems." A longish piece, evidently A Dialogue between the Virgin and the Cross of Christ, followed, treated in the same way. What was to be done? Nothing but groan, say "mistakes are natural to man" (I know they are to me), and print the earlier text. Here accordingly it is, and printed with all its metrical points, and guard-stops on each side of figures and single letters, as in the MS., for an experiment how Members like these points and stops reproduced.

This early Vernon version has not several passages which later transcribers have introduced into the Cotton and Lambeth MSS. It shows that the Lambeth continuation of the Cotton MS. was not a late addition, but that the Cotton had lost its tail. It shows the Lambeth text to be more like it than the Cotton, in the passages which all three contain; and though it does not clear up any of the puzzles of the later copies, it is interesting, as well for its earlier language as for the new Churches it mentions. These are eleven in number, and on them Mr William M. Rossetti has, as on those of the former volume, kindly added notes, which follow this Preface. Thus far I had written when I learnt from Sir F. Madden's Appendix to his Preface to his Syr Gawayne that (the late) Mr Ormsby Gore's Porkington MS. No. 10, contained a copy of the Stations in prose, beginning "In Rome bethe iic paresche churchs." I at once applied for leave to see the MS., and the present Mr Ormsby Gore forthwith obtained it for me from his mother. Its Stacyons proved to be a short and incomplete abstract of our long Poem, in $7\frac{1}{2}$ pages of a very small MS., wisely wound up with an Et C., and I have therefore printed it here for completeness and contrast sake.

has induced me to add to this Text the most amusing Poem on "The Pilgrims' Sea-Voyage and Sea-Sickness," from MS. Trin. Coll., Camb., R. 3, 19, first printed by Mr Halliwell in Reliquiæ Antiquæ, vol. 1, p. 2, 3, and to which the present Keeper of the Printed Books in the British Museum, Mr Thomas Watts—encyclopædic in knowledge and gracious in speech—called my attention some twenty years ago. Mr Aldis Wright has himself read the transcript with the MS., and I do not think that any readers will regret its reproduction here.

The cause of Clene Maydenhod appearing in this Text is Mr Cockayne's edition of that most vivid sketch of an English girl's temptations to forsake marriage and maternityin 1220 a.d., Hali Meidenhad. It is long since I have been so interested in any treatise; and seeing that Clene Maydenhod was in the Vernon, I could not resist the temptation of printing it, for illustration and contrast sake. The texts are paged separately, so that they may be bound, if wished, with those that they refer to; and for the same reason the Index to the names of Men and Churches in Stations refers to the Cotton and Lambeth versions printed in "Political, Religious, and Love Poems," 1866. Mr George Parker, of Rose Hill, Oxford, has read both the Vernon texts with the MS., and my thanks are due to him for his care.

3, St George's Square, N.W., Dec., 1866.

P.S.—The reviewer in The Saturday Review of Dec. 22, 1866, does not understand in what sense we publish our Texts. We print them mainly for our Members; but, remembering the times when we wanted single volumes of the books of the Camden and Percy Societies, the Abbotsford, Bannatyne and other Clubs, and could not get them, we resolved, when starting the Society, to sell each of our texts separately to any person wanting it, at the publisher's profit on its cost: this—though it would be a great nuisance to us by spoiling our sets—to benefit some poor students who might need help. We sell, perhaps, an average of five copies of each Text separately, against 400 odd issued to Members. This is why I conceive myself entitled to write Prefaces as to a circle of my friends; for such I look on Subscribers as being. Did I consider a Saturday Reviewer and the public as part of my audience, I should certainly write in a different tone to them. To the Saturday man I should say, that the libertinism* of his comments was often unworthy of a Free man;

• This called forth the following remarks-reprinted with the heading, " The Saturday's Insolence and The Saturday's Ignorance"—from one of our literary journals now discontinued: "Last Saturday's Punch contains the following paragraph (p. 35, col. 2, No. 349) :- Some fiddler advertises himself in the Musical World as 'l'aganini Redividus.' One would not notice his blunder but for his cheek.' That is our own feeling about a ludicrous blunder occurring in a review of Dr Kingsley's 'Thynne on Chaucer,' in the Saturday Review of the week before, written in that tone of ungentlemanlike assumption and petulant insolence for which one writer, at least, in that journal has long been notorious, and which, at a certain period of its existence, drove men like Professor Pearson and Mr Bowen from its columns. Dr Kingsley-evidently not a careful corrector of the presspassed over his printer's error of printing the Anglo-Saxon thorn, or sharp th, b. us r, n. For this he was jeered at by his reviewer in the regular vulgar-little-boy fashion; and then, by way of displaying his own learning, the little boy went on to explain the difference between th and r. But as strutting daws unwittingly drop the peacock's feathers out of their tails, so this unlucky boy either did not know, or did not notice, that he or his printer had put an Anglo-Saxon w (p) for the th (b): so that there, while he (the clever reviewer) was pointing at Dr Kingsley for his ignorance or carelessness, he was all the time displaying his own, and deliberately forcing every one's attention to the display. Scholars at the Museum, Bodleian, Cambridge, Lambeth, and elsewhere, have enjoyed the self-inflicted punishment that the reviewer's nasty-tempered notice of a book by a courteous, well-read, and widely-esteemed gentleman and man of letters has met with. We make it public on Punch's principle—'One would not notice his blunder but for his cheek;'but we trust we shall have no more such exhibitions in the Saturday's pages; and for the benefit of the reviewer we reprint for him the judgment he passed on his better,-commending to him the study of his 'Anglo-Saxon Grammar,' the 'Printer's Guide,' and 'The Book of Courtesy.'-Of course, we shall be told that all these things are trifles [one 'thing' was the putting a comma for a full stop], most likely misprints. We answer that accuracy and inaccuracy are not trifles, and that a [writer] of a philological [review], who is either so ignorant that he cannot read his text, or so careless that he lets pass misprints which turn that text into nonsense, displays exactly the same crassa ignorantia as an architect who can do everything except build a house, or a surgeon who can do everything except cut off a leg." - The Reader, Feb. 3, 1866. What wonder that this man calls my masterly that wandering through Summer Meads he should be greeted in eye and ear by sights and sounds that should bring him into sweet accord with them, and prevent his always printing every "nasty-tempered" thing he can lay tongue on; that instead of leaving a set of menof whom the chief workers are all poorer than himself—to do a work of much help to him, without his help, but with his sneers, it would be more like a generous gentleman to send his subscription to the Society, and print a text for it with his Saturday pay. I should ask of the chief Cook who presides over the making of the weekly pudding that tickles so many palates and disturbs so many inwards, that he should pick out the bits of grit in the dab of pabulum contributed to his seventh-day compound by the reviewer I have been addressing. To the public on the other hand I should say, what a very stupid public it is for not supporting more vigorously the best and most liberal Early English printing Society that has ever existed: that there are several thousand well-to-do men in this country who can easily spare a guinea a year each to make their forefathers' speech and thoughts better known to this and future generations; and they ought so to spare it. To the Historian and Antiquary the Society's work yields rich fruit; to the Tory who glories in the past, it appeals with strongest claim; to the Liberal who pleads, as cause for modern justice, the ancient tale of poor men's wrongs that starts before the Conquest, the Society makes heard the Every man of culture is bound to supvoice he listens for. port us; and yet hardly any do. The Sanskrit Text Society starts-most rightly-with a first year's subscription of over £1200. The Early English Text Society with a miserable £152. In its third year its income is not much over £600; and when it asks for money to print nineteen Texts in one year, it hardly gets money The apathy of English lettered men on this subject is a disgrace to them; and a journal like The Saturday, which has a chance of rousing them from it, would be much better employed in strokes of irony (N.B.), nonsense, and my brilliant satire (N.M.), bad jokes? When you hear a little boy on Hampstead Heath call to a known cross-country rider, "Why don't you get inside?" need you ask whether the ingenuous youth is a judge of a seat, or is—a little boy?

doing so than in picking out little blemishes in the Society's Texts, and holding them up to show off a reviewer's fancied cleverness, which, as has been shown in some instances, and can be shown in others, has often turned out to be ludicrous ignorance. If we (as we do) point out some of our own shortcomings, we are thankful enough to have others shown us in the right spirit and the right way. The wrong in both,* I for one will protest against as best I can.

[•] The later review of Mr Perry's edition of Hampole's Short Prose Treatises is written in the right and gentleman-like spirit.

NOTES ON THE STACIONS OF ROME.

By W. M. ROSSETTI.

The notes which I wrote to the previous publication of the Early English Text Society, the "Stacyons of Rome" printed from the Cotton and Lambeth MSS., apply in great part to the present earlier version of the same poem from the Vernon MS. There are, however, considerable differences of detail between the MSS., of most of which I must leave the reader to take count for himself; and some churches, not named at all in the previously published version, are mentioned in the one now printed. On these churches, and on another point or two here and there, I proceed to offer a few notes upon the same plan as in the former instance.

Line 40. I must take this opportunity to rectify a slip of the pen in my notes upon the Cotton MS. copy, at the corresponding line, No. 56. The altar mentioned in that line is to "Seynt Symon," or, in the Lambeth and the present Vernon MSS., to "Seint Symon & Jude;" I made the slip of saying that the Cotton MS. specified an altar "to St Jude."

Lines 55-6. The statement here made is that St Peter's Basilica was consecrated "Of Seint Martin pat eiztepe day." In the Cotton MS., lines 121-2, this same statement is made concerning the Basilica of San Paolo fuori le Mura; and St Peter's is stated on the contrary to have been consecrated "On Seynt Petur & Powle day." It appears that the Vernon MS. is correct, and that the two statements made in the Cotton MS. ought to be inverted.

Line 118. Scala Celi. Compare this from "God speed the Plough,"

Then commeth prestis that goth to rome.

For to have silver to singe at Scala celi.

Lansdowne MS., 762, fol. 6.

Line 126. "In tyme of Tibian be Emperour." This potentate, unrecorded by historians, in whose reign 10,000 martyrs suffered in Rome, may perhaps be conjectured to be nominally compounded out of Tiberius, Trajan, and Julian—a very Cerberus of tyranny, persecution, and apostasy. The Cotton MS. limits itself to the first of these three, "Tyberye"—whose reign was assuredly free from any such wholesale persecution.

Line 160. The "holy bones" here named are to be understood as the bones of Sts Peter and Paul. As I pointed out in my former notes, neither the Cotton MS. in saying that these bones lay undiscovered 500 years, nor yet the Vernon MS. in assigning 100 years as the period, can be trusted: the true time being probably more like 19 months.

Lines 183-4 speak of 44 martyr popes who "liueden" in a chapel in the catacombs; in the Cotton MS. it is 46 martyr popes who "lyene" there. I presume that "lyene" is the correct word—if indeed any item of so preposterous an assertion can be termed correct.

Lines 333-4 speak of

"be clob bat crist was wounden Inne

Whon he was child for monnes sinne;"

which seems to mean the swaddling-clothes of the Nativity. These lines correspond to 426-7 in the Cotton MS.,

"And be clobis bat criste was wonden In When he shulde dye for mannis syn";

this latter statement appears to be the more correct, the actual object in question being the face-cloth.

Lines 357-8. According to the position of these lines in the context, the heads of Sts Peter and Paul were under the high altar in the Chapel Sancta Sanctorum in the old Lateran Palace of the Popes. It may be inferred that the lines have slipped a little out of their proper place; and that the high altar really spoken of is that of the Basilica of St John Lateran, which would make the statement about the heads correct. These heads were discovered in or about 1365, in the reign of Pope Urban V., which commenced in 1362. The date of the Vernon MS. is about 1370, when the discovery must still have been an interesting novelty to actual or intending pilgrims to Rome: and, in accordance with this date, we find that the lines of the Cotton MS., 456-9,

"There ys no man now y-bore," &c., which my previous notes cited for the purpose of fixing the date of that MS. at not later than 1445, do not appear at all in the Vernon version of the poem.

Line 427. The Church here (and also in the Lambeth MS.) named "of Seynt veuian" (Vivian) is termed "of Julyan" in the Cotton MS. I am not aware that any Church of St Vivian exists in Rome.

Line 437. St Eusebius is here introduced as connected with the aforenamed Church of St Vivian. The Lambeth MS., however, line 554, speaks of the Church of St Eusebius himself, which I presume to be correct; but the poem hereabouts in all the three MSS. is obviously a good deal muddled. Compare 1. 442 Vernon with 1. 559 Lambeth.

Lines 463-4 are new in the Vernon MS. My old authority, Francino, confirms the statement that a (daily) indulgence of 1000 years and Lents is to be obtained at St Matthew's Church—to which he adds the remission of one-seventh of one's sins.

Lines 473-4. The Church of St Anthony is named in the Vernon MS. only, 1. 473 having evidently slipped out of the Lambeth MS. by mischance. There are in Rome two Churches of St Anthony;—one near Sa Maria Maggiore and St Praxed's, with a Hospital; the other named Sant' Antonio de' Portoghesi, near La Scrofa, dedicated by Pope Gelasius to Sts Anthony and Vincent. To it are annexed a hospital for the Portuguese, and many indulgences and privileges for that nation. The particular grace mentioned by our poet, the remission of one-seventh of one's penance, is not, however, confirmed by Francino with regard to either of these churches.

Lines 529 to 532 set forth the indulgences attaching to Sa Maria Maggiore from Assumption-day to the feast of the Virgin's Nativity (15 August to 8 September). The Lambeth MS. says, Assumption-day to Christmasday, which is an error.

Line 536. Here the name "Prudencian" is erroneous; it should be, as in the Lambeth MS., "Pudencyam"—St Pudentiana.

Line 548. The Vernon MS. reads "hostelled," instead of "harborowed," as in the Lambeth MS.; confirming the inference in my former notes that the statement applies "rather to the house of Pudens than to the cemetery."

Line 558. The extraordinary term "Emperour seint Antonine" seems to point to some corruption of the text. As observed in the former notes, the incident referred to could not, by comparison of dates, have happened in the reign of any of the Antonines.

Lines 563 to 568. The Church of San Martino in Monte, called also San Silvestro e San Martino, was built by Symmachus I. in A.D. 500, on the Esquiline Hill, upon the ruins of the Thermæ of Trajan, and was modernized in 1650. There had been an earlier church on the same spot, founded by S. Silvester in the time of Constantine. I know of no particular reason why the text should specify that the edifice "is not round." The text states that Popes Silvester and Leo are buried under the high altar. I do not find Leo named elsewhere; Murray's Handbook mentions Silvester and Martin I., and Francino concurs in this statement, adding the names of three other Popes.

Lines 569 to 572. There is a Church of San Salvatore del Lauro which stands on the site of the laurel-grove near the Portico of Europa. It was founded in 1450, nearly a century later than the date of our Vernon MS., so that one cannot refer to this Church the allusion in the text. This is the only Church "of seint Saluator" known to me in Rome.

Line 601. Our present text seems to be correct in here naming "Seint Sabyne" (Sabinus), instead of the "Seint Sabasabyne" of the Lambeth MS.

Lines 609 to 612. The Church of St Marcellus, in the Corso, was built by a Roman lady in the 4th century, in honour of Pope St Marcellus, who, by order of Maxentius, was confined in this spot over a stable, the stench of which is alleged to have killed him. It was rebuilt in 1519 by Sansovino, the façade being of a later date. The ceremony of the Exaltation of the Cross is held here on 14 September. Francino does not specify the 1000 years' indulgence of our text, but plenary remission on St Marcellus's day.

Lines 655-6 state that the good knight sometime named Placidas lies at the Church of St Eustace. In the Lambeth MS, the person thus named is St Eustace himself; and, as I can find out nothing about Placidas, I am disposed to infer that he and Eustace are one and the same person.

Line 664 clears up the difficulty in the corresponding line, 866, of the Lambeth MS., which states that "the Mawdlene" is in the Church of St Cecilia. We now learn that this is a foot of the Magdalene.

Line 680. The Church of San Grisogono (Chrysogonus), a saint who was martyred at Aquileia under Diocletian, is in the Trastevere, and supposed to date originally from the time of Constantine; rebuildings took place in 1129 and 1623. An Englishman may like to remember this church in connection with Archbishop Langton, who was its titular Cardinal. The 400 years' indulgence of our poem is not confirmed by Francino, but plenary remission on the day of St Chrysogonus.

Lines 681 to 688. I cannot clearly identify the "chirche of seint tyre and seint Ion;" but should suppose it to be not improbably the Church of Sts John and Paul. There are at least six other churches in Rome bearing the name of St John. The Church of Sts John and Paul—not the apostles, but martyrs of the reign of Julian—was built on the Cœlian Hill, in the 4th century, on the site of the house of these Saints.

Lines 693 to 696. "Seint Angel" may be either the Church of Sant' Angelo in Borgo, or that of Sant' Angelo in Pescaria, close to the Portico of Octavius, and interesting in connection with the enterprise of Rienzi. I should rather suppose it to be the former church, which was built by a beatified Pope Gregory in consequence of his having seen the Archangel Michael sheathing his blood-stained sword above the citadel, or Mole of Hadrian. Francino does not name 1000 years' indulgence as applicable to either of these churches; but plenary remission, at the first, on the octave of St Michael, and, at the second, on the 18th July and 29th September.

Line 701. The Church of St Adrian is in the Forum, and is said to be the ancient Ærarium consecrated to this Saint by Pope Honorius.

Line 704. The Church of St Clement, between the Colosseum and the Lateran, is built over a still more ancient church, which was discovered in 1858, with results of great importance to Christian archæology; the upper church dates probably from the beginning of the 12th century. The traditional origin of the whole foundation was an oratory built by Clement the third Bishop of Rome, a fellow-labourer with St Paul. Instead of the 2000 years' indulgence of the text, Francino specifies plenary remission on the Monday following the second Sunday of Lent, as well as a daily indulgence of 40 years and Lents, doubled during Lent.

Line 705. The Church of "seint Steuene" is probably the Church of santo stefano Rotondo, on the Cælian Hill, now generally supposed to have been originally the circular portion of the Macellum Grande, or Butchers'- meat Market, erected in Nero's time. It was consecrated by Simplicius I. in A.D. 467, and restored by Nicholas V. towards 1447. Rome contains at least two other churches to St Stephen.

Lines 707 to 712 revert to the Church of "seint saluatour"; see 1. 569. The "Bethleem" here mentioned is, I suppose, a Chapel of the Nativity.

Lines 717 to 719. I have been unable to trace the "Chapel of vre ladi" at which St Thomas of Canterbury kept school. It may be a separate building; or it may possibly be merely a chapel in the church last previously mentioned, that of St Alexius, which does, it seems, contain (as Francino relates it) "that image of the most blessed Virgin, on the high tabernacle, which used to be in the city of Edessa—before which the most blessed Alexius, being in the said city, often made prayer. And, going one day to the said church to pray, he found the doors closed; and the said image said twice to the porter, 'Open and give entrance to the Man of God, Alexius, who is worthy of heaven.'"

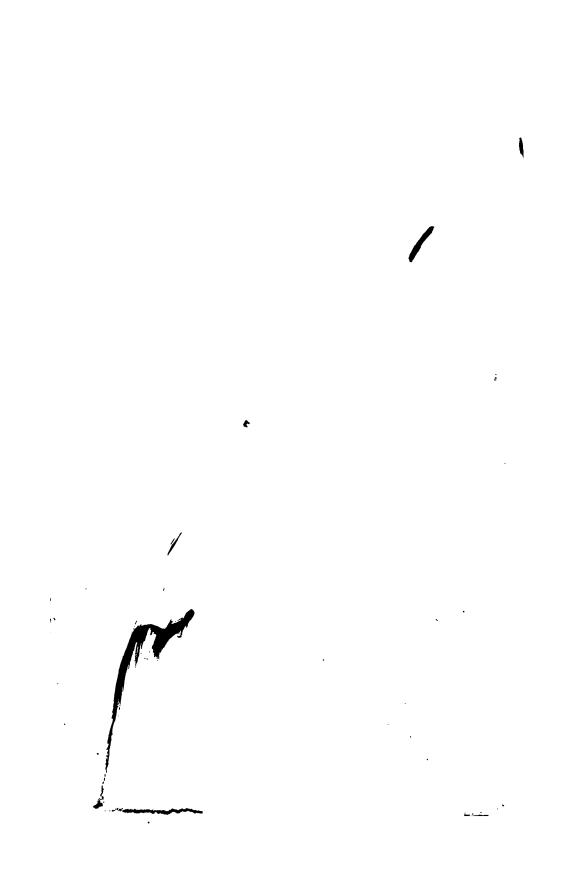

Lines 720 to 726. The Church of St Urban, here mentioned, does not appear in my authorities.

The last service I can tender for my reader's acceptance may be to refer him to a book bearing very closely upon the subject-matter of the "Stacions of Rome," and which I find thus entered in a Bookseller's catalogue:— "Mirabilia Romæ; a German Block-book of nearly 200 pages, being a Handbook for the Pilgrims at Rome in the 15th century. With the most curious descriptions of the relics kept in the Churches; among them the head of St Peter, milk of the Virgin, the circumcisions of Christ, &c.—and of the indulgences given by the priests of the various Churches. Small 4to; 12 copies only reprinted in facsimile by J. Ph. Berjeau." One regrets to read this last item, suggesting the small number of people that will ever be able to benefit by the reprint of so curious a book.

W. M. Rossetti.

P.S.—On the Porkington MS. I observe:

- S. Sylvester in 1303, in connection with the heads of Peter and Paul, is a blunder.
- 2. S. Benyan's Church near S. Gellyan's. This Benyan is Julian in one MS. and Vivian in another: of Benyan I know nothing, but investigation might possibly bring something to light.
- 3. Placidas, the same person as Eustace: so I had guessed in writing on the Vernon MS.; and that conjecture may now be put positively.

The Saturday Review of Dec. 22, 1866, p. 765, col. 1, suggests that this is "no doubt St Katharine on Mount Sinai, mentioned along with Jerusalem as an alternative point within the Holy Land." The Penny Cyclopædia says, "In the midst of the [Sinai] hills, on the height of Jebel Musa, surrounded by higher mountain-tops, and near the summit considered as the proper Sinai of Scripture, is situated the convent of St Catherine, founded, according to the credited tradition, by Helena, the mother of Constantine, in the fourth century." The most approved Legend, says Mr Morton, makes her sister to Constantine (p. xi., Pref. to "The Legend of St Katherine of Alexandria," Abbotsford Club, 1841). The Virgin is said to have married this Saint to Jesus Christ; Maxentius (by some writers), or Maximinius (by others), is said to have tortured her, and put her to death. No contemporary writer mentions her (Morton, p. xi.).

² Bowling, or rather Bow-line, is a Rope made fast to the Leetch, or middle part of the out-side of a Sail, by two, three, or four other Ropes like a Crow's Foot, which is termed the Bowling-bridle; the use of it being to make the Sails stand sharp, or close, or by a Wind. Sharp the main Bowlings, Hale up or set taught the Bowling, are Sea-phrases us'd when the Bowling is to be pull'd up harder, or hal'd forwards on: And To ease, cheek, or rum up the Bowling, is to let it out more slack. Phillips.

To Veer out a Rope, is to put it out by Hand, or to let it run out of itself; as Veer more Cable, i.e. let more of it run out But this Word is not apply'd to any Running-Rope except the Sheats. Sheets (in a Ship) are Ropes bent to the Clews of the Sails, which serve in all the lower Sails to hale aft or round off the Clew of the Sail; but in the Top-Sails they are made use of to hale home, i.e. to draw close the Sail to the Yard-Arms (Those Planks under Water, which come along the Run of the Ship, and are close'd to the Stern-post, are also call'd Sheats). To Ease the Sheat, is to veer it out, or to let it go out gently. To Let fly the Sheat is to let it run out violently, as far as it will go: so that the Sail will then hang loose, and hold no Wind. Phillips.

O se howe welle owre good shyp sayles!" How well she sails ! 36 And thus they say among. "Hale in the wartake 1!" "hit shal be done." Then cometh oone and seyth, "be mery; "Storm's coming. Ye shall have a storme or a pery." "Holde thow thy pese! thow canst no whery, 44 Thow medlyst wondyr sore." The poor Pilgrims Thys mene whyle the pylgryms ly, have their bowls And have theyr bowlys fast theym by, by them, and cry out for hot And cry aftyr hote maluesy, Malmsey : 48 "Thow helpe for to restore." to hale up its Bunt that it may be the more readily taken up or let fall. Hale up the Brails, or Brail up the Sails, an expression us'd by Sea-men when they would have the Sails hal'd up in order to be furled, or bound close to the Yard. Phillips.

¹ There is no such word in our modern sea-terms. If war is the war of warfare, take may mean tackle, and refer to some nettings or apparatus outside the vessel. But if, as is more probable, the take means tack, the rope running from the clew or corner of the lower square-sail, to fasten it inboard through a ring or the like in the deck—(the sheet runs also from the corner, but fastens the sail outside the bulwark, through which it runs to a cleat inside)—then was may mean left or right [¹ guard], according to the tack to be hauled in. The bowline runs from the perpendicular edge of the sail, a third down, to the mast in front, and pulls the sail against the wind so as to keep it bellied. G. M. Hantler.

EARLY POPULAR, POETICAL, AND DRAMATIC LITERATURE OF GREAT BRITAIN,

FROM THE INVENTION OF PRINTING TO 1660.

BY W. CAREW HAZLITT,

EDITOR OF "REMAINS OF THE EARLY POPULAR POETRY OF ENGLAND," &c. &c. &c.

• • This work, which has been an eight or nine years' labour of love to the Editor, will bring together in a convenient compass a large variety of fresh information, and very numerous notices of unknown or undescribed editions and works in Early English and Scotish Literature.

Early English Text Society.

Third Annual Report of the Committee. January, 1867.

ONCE more the Committee have the pleasing task of announcing to the Members the still continuing success of the Society. Since its first year its annual income has more than quadrupled (1521, to 6811); its yearly issue of Texts has nearly trebled (4 to 11); its members have nearly trebled (145 to 409), and never before has any Society of a like kind, in any year, given to the public such a variety and amount of the records of early English thought and work. During the past year the Society's Texts of 1864 and 1865 have nearly all gone out of print o; and the Committee's order to the printers for future issues has consequently been raised, first from 500 to 750, and then from 750 to 1000 copies. Moreover, the past year has been signalised by the direct co-operation of two of the older Societies - the Philological and Camden - with our own in the production of certain of our Texts, and by the efforts of the Kent Archæological Association to circulate the Society's edition (Mr. Morris's) of the most important monument of the early Kentish dialect, The Ayenbite of Inwyt. Could this co-operation be carried further, each Society offering yearly to all the others with similar aims a share in such of its publications as those other Societies might severally choose, a great boon would be conferred on students; each Society would lighten the cost of publication to its own members, and largely extend the circulation of the books it produced, and which it should wish to see in the hands of as many readers as possible.

* As future Subscribers are sure to want these back Texts, the Committee have opened a separate Reprinting Fund, to which, until all the Texts that need reprinting are reprinted, they will carry all subscriptions for 1864-5-6, as well as the amount received for reprinted Texts and for the Texts of 1866 now in hand. Mr. Wheatley will receive and enter the names of those present and future Members who will undertake to buy the Texts of any back year when reprinted; and as soon as the number of promises reaches the amount required for reprinting the Texts of any one year, they will at once be sent to press, and issued to the Members subscribing for them. The Texts of 1864 will cost about 1201. to reprint (of which 301. may be looked on as already provided), and the Texts of 1865 about 3001. If 200 fresh Members to take the back Texts can be obtained during this year, as they should be, the reprinted Texts of both 1864 and 1865 can be issued in 1867. No subscriptions for any current year will be carried to this Reprinting Fund, as the Committee will adhere to the plan which has alone enabled them to produce so many Texts as they have done, that of spending each year's subscriptions for the benefit of those who contribute them.

The Committee declare their intention of thus offering the Society's Texts to other Printing bodies, and appeal to them to do the like to the Early English Text Society.

Another most gratifying circumstance in the past year has been the marked success of the examinations at Universities and Colleges for the Society's prizes of two years' issues of its Texts*. The winners of these prizes were,—

So far as the Committee can judge from the reports of the different Professors to them, and from the answers of some of the Students that have been sent up to them, they look on the stir which the Society has thus given to the study of our early Literature in so many centres of intellectual life as one that will produce the best results, especially now that the publication of Mr. R. Morris's Early English Extracts (in the Clarendon Press Series) puts, for the first time in the history of the language, a trustworthy text-book and guide into learners' hands. The generous way in which the Professors have responded to the Society's call, giving often extra lectures, and always extra examinations, for the Prizes, calls for special acknowledgment on our Already one School has followed the example of our Col-To the Rev. Edwin A. Abbott, Head-master of the City of London School, belongs the credit of having introduced Piers Plowman as a class-book for his highest form, and of having insisted on a thorough training in English throughout his School. This is the beginning, the Committee trust, of a general knowledge of English historically by Englishmen, and they have gladly added to their list of annual prize-receivers this City School.

Two other events the Committee also allude to with pleasure: 1. The publication of an accurate Text from the best MS. of each of Chaucer's Poetical Works by Mr. Richard Morris (though, unfortunately, without the collation and notes that the editor desired to add); and, 2, The undertaking to edit Bishop Percy's long-hidden folio MS.—the foundation of his celebrated Reliques - by three members of the Society, Professor Child, Mr. Hales, and Mr. Furnivall. It was only the entire absorption of the Society's limited resources by works already in the press, and its consequent inability to meet a call for 600l. in six months, that prevented the manager of the Percy scheme from making it part of the Society's ordinary work, and the Committee from undertaking it. As it is, the print of the MS. will be obtainable by members of the Society at half the cost to non-members, and the Committee give notice that they will consider the Arthur and other Romances in the Percy folio as part of the Society's Texts, and as not needing reproduction in the Society's series to which such Romances, The completion by the Surtees Society of their edition of the text of the Lindisfarne and Rushworth Gospels is also matter of congratulation; and it is to be hoped that the Glossary to, and Treatise on, the dialect of these inestimable Northern remains, promised by their latest editor, will soon follow the works themselves. Lastly, the Committee call attention to the assignment by Mr. Henry Bradshaw, to Barbour, the author of The Brus, of two works hitherto unknown to be written by him: 1. Fragments of a Troy-Book, mixed up with some copies of Lydgate's Troy-Book; and, 2, nearly 40,000 lines of Lives of Saints. Should no other Society print these before our own is ready to undertake them, they will be issued among the Early English Text Society's publications in due course. The Anglo-Saxon Book of Martyrs that Mr. Cockayne has just claimed as King Alfred's, is to be printed by that gentleman in his Shrine.

^{*} Though there are not now two years' issues in hand for next season's prizes, the number of 12 Texts given will be kept up.

Turning now to the Society's special work—the issue of Texts—the Committee note that in its first class, Romances, during the last year four books have been issued, two of which are printed from unique MSS. for the first time: Merlin, Part II., Kyng Horn, part of Floris and Blancheflour, and Partenay. The Gawaine Poems were kept back by their editor's other engagements; but they are now ready for press, and will be sent to it forthwith.

In the Society's second class—Dialectal works—the event of the year has been the issue of the first great monument of the Kentish dialect, in 1340 A.D., the Ayenbite of Inwyt, not mutilated, as in the former edition, but complete, and with an almost exhaustive glossary and a treatise on the dialect by Mr. Richard Morris. The same dialect has received further illustration from the early treatises edited by Mr. Cockayne, the latter of which—Hali Meidenhad—has also brought into bright relief a passage in the life of English girls in 1220—30 A.D., unequalled in interest by any known publication of the time. The Northern dialect has been illustrated not only by the continuation of the works of Schir David Lyndesay of the Mont, Lord Lyone Kyng of Armes, with his eloquent denunciation of the wrongs of his time, but by the first treatises of the Society's complete edition of Hampole's works, accompanied by the unique and much-desired Life of the Hermit^o, edited by Mr. Perry, whom we thank for thus re-creating for us this old English worthy.

Into the third, or Religious class of the Society's Texts, fall as well the Ayenbite, Seinte Marherete, Hali Meidenhad, and Hampole tracts, already alluded to, as the Assumption of the Virgin, edited by Mr. Lumby, and the Religious Poems, edited by Mr. Furnivall. By these the superstitions and faith of our forefathers have been illustrated; and of one Poem, carefully annotated by Mr. Wm. Rossetti, The Stacions of Rome, a second, and earlier text—discovered after the issue of the first—will be published.

Though the fourth and Miscellaneous class received last year no such accession as the Wright's Chaste Wife brought to it in the year before, yet the printing of the Political Poems from the Lambeth MS. 306 has at least proved the wisdom of having gleaners after Government labourers in the field; and The Boke of Quintessence has exhibited some of the oddities in the rise of that science which, as modern Chemistry, commands the admiration and respect of men. The Piers Plowman extracts have cleared the way for Mr. Skeat's complete edition of the poem, and are a guarantee to members and the public that all care will be used in securing the best texts, and in collating them with the others next in value.

On the whole, while the Committee look back with some satisfaction to the results of the past year, they cannot but feel how much more might have been effected if the generality of members had exerted themselves to procure new subscribers in the way that a few of their body have done. Among these, the Committee desire publicly to thank the Local Secretary in Manchester, Mr. John Leigh, who, although he had in the first half of the year obtained twelve new subscribers, on the issue of Mr. Furnivall's Circular in June promised at once to obtain twelve more subscribers: and did Our Publisher, too, has been very zealous in the Society's behalf; and his list numbers 33 subscribers. Now this is working for editors, as editors work for members; and when once this spirit animates the whole of our subscribers, a real beginning will be made to the work the Society has set itself-the bringing to light the whole of the hidden springs of the noble Literature that England calls its own. The Society's is the first resolute attempt at this colossal work, as a whole, and it rests simply in the hands of our members whether the work shall be done or not. The present year should see the Society's income of last year at least doubled, for the revenue from the sale of past years' Texts is now exhausted, and then the way will be cleart.

The Texts that can be produced this year, if funds enough are supplied, are no less than thirty-two in number. Of these, three have already left the press; and are issued to members with this Report.

^{*} A revised impression of the Vita et Legenda will be issued to members forthwith.

[†] We want also Editors in Oxford and Edinburgh.

A glance at the List above will show what important and interesting contributions will be made to our Literature if only the first twenty of these books can be produced this year: a new Romance, the continuation of a second; the first collection of the Statutes of our Guilds, and the fullest collection yet made of tracts on the Meals and Manners of our early times, illustrating the social condition of our ancestors; the duties of the Parish Priest; the labours of the Husbandman; the work of the Gardener; the warnings of the Divine; a Father's Counsel to his Daughters, enforced by quaintest tales; traces of CHAUCER (with a discussion of his dialect and pronunciation); the rise of our great Piers Plowman; the story of the World; — surely, these, with much most valuable material for the historian of our language (among it, evidence of a new stage in the development of our tongue), are worth an effort to produce during the year; and each member must settle with himself whether he will make it.
